

This PDF contains various commissions I picked up throughout the last several years. These contain some examples of branding I have done for a band as well as some ideations of character designs and logos for a podcast.

Pink Salt is a indie band that I did commission work for. I created several album and single cover designs, their logo, and their monkey character.

Pink Salt was originally known as Latona's Pride! While they were in the midst of branding themselves I had created their logo. In the end, it was scrapped and unused.

Another piece of commission work I have done was the branding of the idea of a podcast known as Schizoid. Although, still stuck in the ideation stages, the podcast focused the hot takes the hosts had about music, gaming, and other hobbies they were interested in. They would dive deep into the meanings and theories behind certain things and just leave a place for open discussion for these “nerdy” subjects.

Each episode would consist of a thumbnail of their cartoon characters with different poses and expressions here are some sketches of these thumbnail “emotes”.

Lastly, A friend of mine was starting a dessert business with her family. She commissioned me to help create a logo design for her.
